Tacoma's North Slope Historic District

October 2011

Tacoma's North Slope District Progressive Dinner is Back!

Entree By Marrow!

The restaurant is the creation of Jaime Kay Jones, along with husband Jason Jones and is co-owned by Chef, Kyle Wnuk. Chef Kyle will present a delectable main Course that will surely be remembered as a highlight of this year's event. Of course, he will offer a vegetarian option in line with the "Arrow" style.

Check out "Marrow" on their website at: <http://marrowtacoma.com/>

This Years' Progressive Dinner is Going to be Amazing!

In addition to the wonderful homes and company to be enjoyed at the appetizer and dessert stops, this year we have two local and amazing restaurants contributing to the entrée and soups stops along the way.

Soup Course By "Infinite Soups!"

"Infinite Soups" has been one of Tacoma's best kept secrets for quite a while! The owner's Wendy Clapp, Todd DeShazo and Laura Adams are totally natural and green with their shop, their ingredients, and their business practices. They put out 25 or 30 of the BEST and most unusual soups I've ever tasted, and they do it on a daily basis for an amazingly small price. The menu changes every day and they're all about tasting as many as you like to find just the right one(s) for you. Oh...and don't bring plastic cuz it won't fly there.

Slide Show Presentation

On October 27th, at Immanuel Presbyterian, the North Slope Historic District will host a slide show of the new book Tacoma's North Slope, narrated by the author, North Slope resident Karen May; the book also has some photos by Gyda May. The program starts at 7PM, with a social hour at 6:30PM. You can learn about the Carrs and other North Slope history at this general neighborhood meeting.

The September 1st CityLine interview with the author on TV Tacoma is available online. See: www.cityoftacoma.org/page.aspx?hid=10248 or Google "City Archives"

"When I moved to the North Slope in 2009, I wanted to know more about the history of my new neighborhood. I already had copies of Arcadia books such as South Tacoma and Proctor, so I went to the bookstore. The clerk said there was no North Slope book, and suggested I write one. The rest, as they say, is history..."

The presentation covers schools, churches, homes and early residents of the North Slope neighborhood.

Copies of the book can be found at area bookstores.

Job Carr, a direct descendant of Rhode Island colonial governor Caleb Carr, arrived in Tacoma at the age of 51. He purchased land in Old Tacoma and also homesteaded property on the crest of what became known as Job Carr's Hill, or Tacoma's North Slope. Carr was a Quaker, a man of peace, a patriot who had been wounded defending the Union, and a master gardener who cleared the forest to plant fruit trees.

When asked how she came to write this book, Mrs. May said,

North Slope Featured Home

The Burton and Rose Moore House
414 North Sheridan Avenue (formerly North "N" Street)
Tacoma, Washington

Our house is relatively small (2000 sf.) compared to most houses in the North Slope Historic District, but that's what we wanted. We also wanted "old world charm," something that hadn't been remuddled beyond recognition or McMansionized, and a smaller yard that would be easier to care for. Our agent showed us a few houses that were just too big or too much work, and then he drove us by this one. It was late November, getting dark, raining, and dreary. About all we could see of the house was the "for sale" sign and some weird rock stuff glued to one side of the front porch. We didn't have time to go in, but he encouraged us to look at the MLS online. The website description stated: "Well maintained historical 1901 Dutch gable Victorian. 3 beds, 1 ½ baths, all the charm of yesteryear & all the modern conveniences. In North Slope, the largest national historic district in the U.S. Ambrose Russell, architect. Period light fixtures, glass built-in cabinets, original open oak staircase, gleaming hardwood floors, and wood trim throughout...pictures don't do this home justice."

Mr. Sabo and I decided to take a look. The house was partially hidden by a large blue spruce, so it was barely noticeable from the street. But, we wanted to see that "charm of yesteryear," so we thought we'd take a closer look. The weird rock stuff was actually a granite turret (that matches the one on the Murray Mansion next door). We could see that the house had potential. We looked inside and saw oak floors that were beautiful (all level and true), the granite foundation (still solid after 100+ years), the round room in the foyer (great place for a Christmas tree or the Chinese settee), and that fantastic open staircase. Mr. Sabo and I went home and thought about it and came back the next weekend for another look. It was a rare sunny December afternoon. (The house is situated so you get sun coming through the front bedroom in the early morning and the staircase in the afternoon). We looked at the sunlight shining through the old, wavy glass in the Palladian window at the top of the stairs, smooched, and declared our love for the house....We made an offer....and she was ours.

Then reality set in. The shake roof that the inspector said would last at least five more years started to leak...Mr. Sabo spent many an evening in the attic trying to patch the leaks with old tin can lids (like gallon- sized tomato sauce). After a particularly severe windstorm, we found rotten shakes strewn around the front yard. We gave in and decided to have the roof replaced, and, after much deliberation, chose a roofer. They finally started our roof after Halloween. They tore off the old shakes and covered the attic with plastic, except for the turret room. I was watching TV when I heard a drip, drip, drip. I ran to the front of the house....there was half an inch of water on the turret room floor. Needless to say, Mr. Sabo made them come back (at 9:30 PM) to cover it up. We had to run fans for a week to dry things out. Our roof is guaranteed to last for 50 years. When it is time to replace it, I don't think we'll use the same company!

We have replaced the monster octopus furnace in the basement with a wonderful, really expensive one. It even heats the upstairs of the house! We have had the chimney rebuilt (that's another story), restored original windows, stripped endless layers of old wallpaper, and Mr. Sabo is finishing up a brick patio. We put in a round flower bed where the old spruce used to be (It was leaning on the porch and we were afraid it was going to fall on the house. Sadly, we had it taken out). We even found a hidden staircase from the kitchen to the upstairs. I kept telling Mr. Sabo that, according to my calculations, there was extra space behind the bathroom. So, for my birthday, he let me drill a hole in the back of the built-in linen closet in the upstairs hall. Sure enough, the doorway was behind it. Future projects include opening up that staircase, new real linoleum floor in the kitchen (to replace the indoor-outdoor carpet), back porch re-do, new bathroom, having our 1929 Magic Chef stove refurbished, and the fireplace (a huge, strangely out-of-place, floor-to-ceiling Roman brick number circa 1940-something w/ Heatolator, painted glossy white)and the list goes on!

All kidding aside, Mr. Sabo and I are old house people. We've restored homes in Ohio and Seattle. We knew what we were getting into when we bought this old house, and we knew it would take work, money, patience, money, skill, elbow grease, and more money. The fact that this house was designed by a major architect, Ambrose Russell (Spaulding, Russell & Heath) and that it was in an older, established neighborhood (with trees and front porches) were selling points for us. We feel honored that our house shares the Russell pedigree with such venerable old homes as the Governor's Mansion, the Rust Mansion, the Rhodes Mansion, the Murray Mansion, and many other North Tacoma beauties.

The original owners of our house were Burton and Rose Moore. He was a stenographer at Fogg & Fogg Attorneys on Tacoma Avenue. In 1919, they sold it to Thomas and Hattie Brewitt, who lived here until 1940. Mr. Brewitt was a tailor from England and co-owner of Brewitt Bros. Clothing on Pacific Avenue. Hattie was a teacher at Stadium High School. There was a succession of owners until 1956, when it was sold to Ammon and La Rie Harris, owners of the Chef Café on Center Street. After Mr. Harris's death it was sold to Joan Benner in 1981. We are looking for more history on our house and would appreciate hearing from anyone who might have pictures (especially the original fireplace), stories, or information about it. Reporting Non-Emergency Issues to Police.

NEW CITY LAW HELPS WITH NOISY CAR PROBLEMS

In early May, the TNT published a short article about a new ordinance that makes it easier for police officers to help neighborhoods address noise problems from loud mufflers and stereos on cars. I called our Community Liaison Officer, Jennifer Terhaar, and she emailed me how to report repeating offenders. Officer Terhaar wrote:

“I would suggest that you call in your complaints (when they are occurring) to the 911 Non-Emergency Line. The number is 253-798-4721. The 911 dispatchers answer this (phone) line in-between emergency calls.

Provide as much information about the cars, and their whereabouts. Obviously, you will get a better police response if the cars are stationary when you call, and note that due to call loads, we cannot always dispatch an officer to lower-priority calls like this in a timely manner.”

It was suggested in the TNT that information such as driver’s name, make of car, and a license number will facilitate enforcement of loud music coming from cars. CLO Terhaar reported that another ordinance covers loud mufflers, or the lack of one, but you can use the same police non-emergency number, with the same information.

You can reach CLO Terhaar at 253-591-5290, by email: jterhaar@cityoftacoma.org.

Volunteers Keep this Neighborhood Beautiful

Parks and Beautification Got Some Great Lending Hands Last Year!

The Park and Beautification Committee was busy during 2010. Volunteers included Pam Boyles and Rocky Johnson; John Butler; Bill and Susan Connolly; Jean Hoard; Bill and Kris Johnston; Nick Kristensen; Marshall McClintock; Scott Kuehn; Kyle Price; Dave, Josephine and Dylan Root; Mike Sabo and Barbara Tomberg.

Altogether, they spent 40 hours combing the neighborhood for litter, filling 49 grocery-size bags, and 56 hours planting, weeding, pruning and mulching traffic circles and the North Slope Historic District Park. Our thanks also go out to Immanuel Presbyterian Church, John Sandstrom, and the Turner family for adopting N. I St., N. J St. and N. L St. respectively through the Tacoma Cares program. If you are interested in adopting your street, a nearby traffic circle, dead-end, etc., call 591-5634 or direct your browser to <http://www.cityoftacoma.org/page.aspx?hid=1768>.

Three Neighborhood Council Innovative grants, awarded to us by the North End Neighborhood Council, have enabled us to landscape and maintain the traffic circle at N. L St. and N. 5th St., remove the vandalized street tree on N. Sprague Ave. adjacent to Jason Lee Middle School, prune two street trees that are of state-wide importance because they are among the largest trees of their species, and remove 35 stumps from the city right-of-way.

If you would like to join the Park and Beautification Committee, contact Geoff at 253-572-5474 or corso1965@live.com. If you can't volunteer your time but can make a tax-deductible donation payable to the "North Slope Historic District," please send your check to the NSHD Treasurer, Tim Chen, at 1101 N. 5 St. If you want your donation to be used for publishing and distributing this newsletter, publishing NSHD Web site <http://www.tacomnorthslope.com/>, etc., specify that your donation is for the "General Fund." If you want to help us help the City of Tacoma and Metro Parks maintain their properties within the historic district (e.g., landscaping and maintaining the park and traffic circles), specify that your donation is for the "Improvement Fund."

Big THANKS from Geoff And All of US!!

Another Great Volunteer

In August, 2011, all the streets in the North Slope Historic District were cleaned of litter by a high school senior from Seattle. Jennifer Sain, age 17 and oldest granddaughter of Julie and Jay Turner, earned five community service credits for graduation by picking up litter – a lot of litter!

With one or the other of her grandparents following in their van, Jennifer walked the streets and filled plastic grocery bags with debris in the gutters, streets and parking strips.

"I drew the line at picking up cigarette butts, but I did all the other stuff. I can't believe how many things were thrown on the ground! Somebody needs to do this more often," she said.

Some people in NSHD already have adopted areas to patrol for litter, but more help is needed. The Adopt-a-Spot program has volunteers for North I, J, and L Streets, but additional help is needed, particularly in the areas within a few blocks of Division, and on K Street. The requirements are flexible, with only 2 or 3 pick-up times a year officially called for, but some places need cleaning more often. Geoff can be reached at 253-572-5474 if you'd like to chip in.
